ROUNDSMAN DELANEY COMMENDED. E-ULF OF THE INQUEST IN THE CASE OF PATRICE MCGOWAN.

The inquest in the case of Patrick McGowan, the bartender at McGlory's dance place, who was shot and kulled in a cab on Tuesday by Roundsman Delaney in front of No. 144 Hoster-st. was resumed yesterday before Coroner Levy. James Rolan, the farmer of Danbury, Conm., who claimed that on Saturday night he was swindled out of $20 by a bartender at Andrew Kelly's place, No. 144, testified that on Fussday, with Roandsman John Delaney and a friend, Albert Kessler, he want to the place to have the Lartender arrested. Not finding him, they went upstairs to see Mr. Kelly, who was sick. McGowan, who was in the barroom drinking with a woman named Tillie Cavanagh, followed them upstairs, and with a vile imprecation ordered them out. The witness "got out pretty keen." Albert Kessler, a hatter living at the Van Dyke House, where Nolan was staying; said that McGowan seized the policeman, saving; "Get out of this or I'll blow your brains out." Delaney produced his warrant, telling who he was and showing his shield, when McGowan seized the officer by the neck with one hand and hit him over the forehead two or three times with the butt of a revolver. Delaney cried out to the witness: "For God's sake get some help; they are killing me." The witaess then ran to the police station and the sergeant sent aid to the officer.

James Coonay, the bartender at No. 144 Hesterst. Kelly's place, testified that he helped the roundsman down stairs and left him at the door. John O'Brien, a carpenter, of Hester-st. and the Bowery, saw Delaney stienpt to prevent McGowan from entering the carriage. McGowan got in, shut the door, and Delaney ran to the back of the carriage as it was driven off, firing two shots through the window. Delaney ten fell to the ground.

Mrs. Tillie Cavanagh, of No. 34 Suxth ave, did not know there was any trouble until the policeman approached the coach. McGowan then drew a revoiver and the winess crouched in the bottom of the carriage, stopping her ears with her hands, so that she heard no firing. Soon after she saw a str dying? The carriage then stopped, and she lumped out.

John Murphy, the driver, of No. 95 Thompson-st., told a direct story, contradicting Cooney. He said that as McGowan entered the carb Delaney, who was staggering and bleeding, said to the witness, "Stop; I'm an officer." Delaney then dragged McGowan from the coach, when Cooney came out in his shirt sleeves and pulled the officer off. McGowan jumped in, and the witness, in terror, droveaway, subsequently going to the police station. Soon after he started the witness heard three or four pistol shots, one of them seeming to come from the carriage. Delaney had tollowed the coach, and after the shooting he fell to the pavement. Captain Petty testified that Delaney said at the police station, when identifying McGowan: "I hat is the man who seized me by the throat, struck me with a pistol in the face and eyes and shot me, and I shot him."

Deputy-Coroner Doulin found that one shot lodged in McGowan's right shoulder; the other pas ed through his heart and lodged in the right lang. The jury found a verdict accordingly, and prased Roundsman Delaney for the faithful discharge of his daty. Coroner Levy commended Captain Petty for his action in the case. Last night Delaney was doing well at St. Vincent's Hospital.

McPartland was in the place, very drunk, and apparently not injured. His ciothes were ragged and fifthy, and the soles of his shoes were worn through in places. Coroner Aierkle took the testimouy yesterday of James Ryan, of No. 19 Albany-st., who was in the blace at the time. He said that about midnight he was satting in a chair in the bar-room at No. 122 Washington-st., when two strangers came in and insisted on having drinks. The bartender, Donnelly, refused to give them the liquor, whereupon Paul, with a vile exclamation, seized a pewier pitcher from the bar and threw it at Donnelly. The bartender dodged this and Paul then threw at him a kettle of boiling water which he took from the stove. The witness then tried to stop Paul, whereupon the latter hit him in the pit of the stomach and rendered him unconscious. When the witness recevered his senses a general fight was going on, and Paul was about to strike Donnelly with a chair, whereupon the bartender drew a revolver and shot his assultant. Officer O'Brien was called in and arrested Donnelly. Paul died instautly, the bail penetrating the centre of the forehead. A BURIAL GROUND TO BE ABANDONED.

A meeting was held in the sacristy of St. Patrick's Cathredral yesterday forencen to consider the question of removing the bodies intered in the Catholic cemetery in East Eleventh-st. to Calvary Cemetery. About 100 persons were present, Vicar-General Quinn presided and on taking the chair explained that the direct purpose of the removal was not to sell the land now occupied by the burial ground in East Eleventh-st., and that there was no occasion for any display of feeling in the matter. It was simply a transfer of human remains from one plot of consecrated ground to another, and would be done with reverent care at the expense of the Church. The time would surely come when the bodies would be removed from the East Eleventh-st, burying ground, and it was better that it should be done now when it could be done reverently and carefully. None but pew-hold-rs in the Cathedral, he said, would be allowed to vote on the question.

A. J. Delan y, of No. 224 Varick-st., a lawyer. protested against the proposed removal. He said that he was a grave-owner and hada right to vote. Monsigner Quinn then read the law on the subject, which provides that only pew-holders of the church to which the cemetery belongs shall be entitled to vote in such cases. Mr. Delaney still continued to protest vigorously and the Vicar-General at length ordered the sacristry to be cleared of all but pew-holders. This was quietly effected, Mr. Delaney handing in a written protest. The meeting was then regularly organized. Vicar-General Quinn said that if the ground in East Eleventh-st. were sold the money would be used toward the payment of the debts of the old and new Cathedrals, which amount to $400,000 on the new and $40,000 on the old. There was no immediate prospect, however, he said, that the land would be sold. All of those present were asked to express their views as to the advisability of the proposed removal and many of them did so. The vote stood twenty-four for the removal and one against it.
